In Memoriam

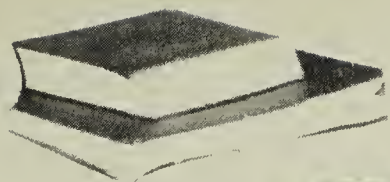

"Alas, that all we loved of thee
should be

But for our grief, as though it had not been

And grief itself be mortal,
Woe is me..."

To Florida James, who once was one of us,
we describe this epitaph.

A BACKWARD GLANCE into the past.

A FORWARD LOOK into the future.

The past is locked secure,
The future remains to be opened . . .

DEDICATION

DEDICATION

The dedication of an annual is indeed a mild tribute to pay to one who has spent the greater part of his life serving this Institute which we all love.

So fine a person needs more than words as an indication of our gratitude and appreciation. Yet, when this gratitude is mingled with the pledge that we shall ever be loyal to this Hampton that he has helped to build, we feel that his heart will be glad for us and for Hampton.

To Major Walter R. Brown we respectfully dedicate the HAMPTONIAN '51.

The President

So proudly do we hail our president, Alzono G. Moron '27, eighth president of the Institute and first alumnus to become leader of the school.

Under his capable guidance, Hampton cannot but become one of the brighter stars on the educational horizon of this new half-century.

Hampton Institute

Hampton, Virginia

Office of the President

To the Members of the 1951 Graduating Class:

I wish you were leaving Hampton and entering a world which was less confused and confusing. However, since you are children of the depression who have grown up in an atmosphere of wars and rumors of war, you have no dewy memories of a peaceful humdrum existence. There still lies ahead of you the job of making a significant contribution to the development of a civilization which is dedicated to the achievement and preservation of peace. That peace, which is best defined as tranquility of order, can be achieved only if we recognize that tranquility of order cannot prevail if millions of the world's population continue to be deprived of their right to determine how they shall be governed, their right to develop their own resources and potentialities for their own benefit, and their right to enjoy the four freedoms made famous by the Atlantic Charter. There can be no peace until we achieve a more equitable distribution of the world's wealth and make it possible for millions of children to get enough to eat regularly, to acquire the rudiments of an education and to share with us the opportunity to grow up to healthy and productive manhood and womanhood.

Those of us who have been the beneficiaries of a system of government and an economic order which made it possible for us to have these benefits should realize that the best use we can make of our education is to enrich the lives of those less fortunate than we are. It has been said that the best way to find one's self is to lose one's self in the service of others. As we develop efficient instruments of destruction, as we recognize the inadequacy of material things for protecting us from moral and physical disaster, we must learn to rely upon spiritual strength, upon the intangibles of character, personal integrity, and Christian faith to give us the peace and security which we all desire.

As alumni of Hampton, Institute, it is my sincere hope that you will be found in the vanguard of all movements seeking to improve the welfare of mankind everywhere, that you will develop the keen sense of discrimination necessary to recognize such movements and to keep you from being confused by lies and propaganda, and that you will develop also the intellectual curiosity which is the mark of an educated man or woman. Most of all, I sincerely hope that you will continue your education in order that you may continue to grow in wisdom, in understanding, and in usefulness.

With best wishes, I remain

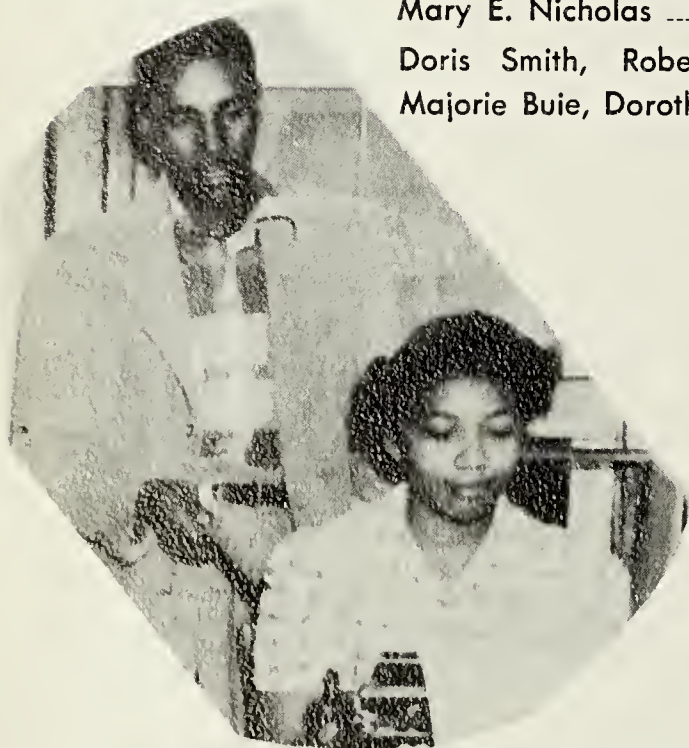

Sincerely yours,

Alonzo G. Moron
President

Yearbook Staff

Foreword

The recording of events, whether current or long past, should always be left to the Historian. One must always separate the important from the irrelevant; the big from the small. But yet, the small may be important, the large a nuance, and vice versa. Yearbook production requires the separation and classification of persons and events into orderly and sequential categories; requires the translation of the material gained therefrom into intelligible phrases and logical pictorial representations. Yet, who is to say what is important and what is not. Who can say if the game is of more import than the dance; the dance of greater relevance than the grill; the lot of them of less importance than the class. Or better yet, is the class subsidiary to the individual.

Such are only a few of the fundamental problems faced by the staff of this year's HAMPTONIAN. There are always other problems such as the laxity of organizations in subscribing to space, the difficulty of determining the classification of individuals, the meeting of production deadlines and innumerable others.

Yearbook production then, is at best, a luckless task, a task which to us at times seemed of no less than monumental proportions. The work of the artists seemed to overlap that of the writer; the writer rubbed elbows with the publicist, the publicist with typists, and so on. In short, the lay observer would have understandably said that all was confusion, and so it might have been. Nevertheless, at the proper time, and in good time, categories became apparent, a flow of material could be seen, sequences were observed and, to summarize, ability engendered with the material at hand and of that union was begot an embryo which grew from fledgling into this fully developed yearbook which you now read.

Here then, is your HAMPTONIAN '51. Here you are; here are we; here are those we knew; here is the child who fathered the man; the wiser man who was a child.

Here is your HAMPTONIAN '51.

— The Editor.

WE LOVE THEE DEAR HAMPTON WITH ALL OUR HEART WITH THY

FOUND MEMORIES WILL NEVER PART IN

SERVICE WE'LL SERVE THEE IN LOYALTY; IN-

SPIRED BY THE FLAME OF SINCE VIRTU- TY

THO OUR DAYS OF WORK AND FUN ARE GONE YET LIFE HAS

JUST BE-CAUSE; WE CAN NEVER FOR-GET THESE, AL-THOUGH ONE DAY

Class Poem

Ah, Would that we could stay the hour,
Arrest Old Time; disrupt the power
That speeds that yet unwanted day,
When, Hampton, we must leave thy way.

We needs must go, yet we would stay,
To leave is right — is right thy way?
Oh, how this gross ambiguity
Does vex us with uncertainty.

Yet if thou bless us as we part,
We will, with sad but fuller heart,
Divorce reluctance from our minds;
Go forth and make thy name sublime.

We shall, and this we swear to you;
Remember, honor, love, be true.
Nor world enough nor time enough can ever be,
For us to lose this loyalty to thee.

—Nathaniel Marshall

Class History

Did you ever stop your daily tasks long enough to look back over the years and think of those incidents and events you remember most vividly. To some people, our little thoughts may seem insignificant; but to us — the Class of '51 — they are very dear. Some may call it day dreaming; call it what you may, our dreams are truly wonderful.

When we, as freshmen reached the soil of Hampton Institute, the Administration was undergoing a change. An interim committee soon began to carry out the administrative duties. How well we remember the beautiful snowfall of that year. The heavy rains that almost made us develop web feet. Then dreams of becoming seniors; yes, even at that early date. Ours was the first class to move from the water front building to the new Communications Center with its improved equipment.

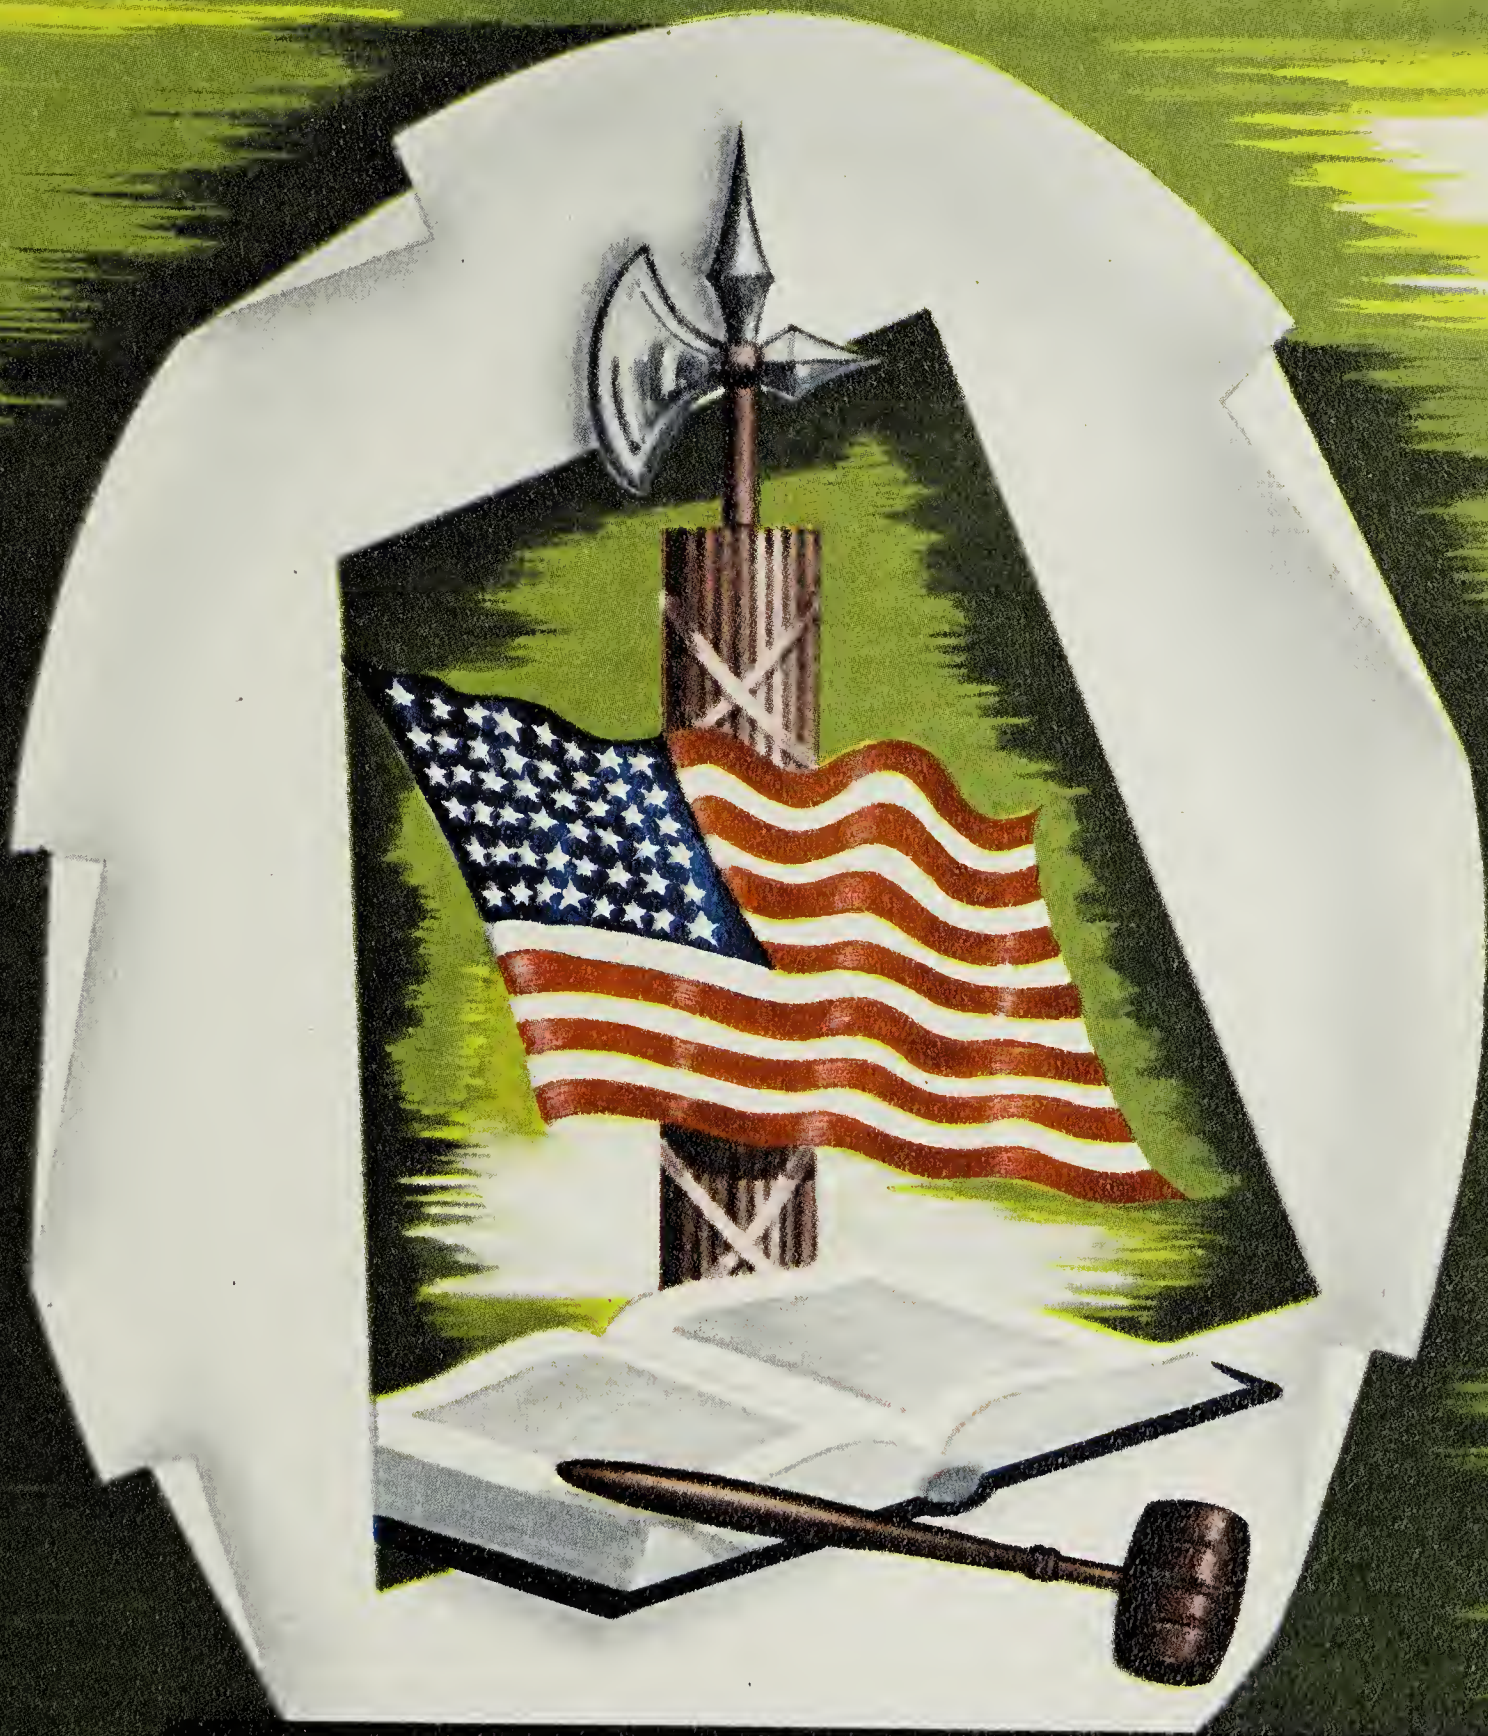

We recall, during our second year, an alumnus becoming president-elect of Hampton for the first time. Armstrong field was improved with the addition of a lighting system and new bleachers. We observed with glee the opening of our consolidated post office and commissary. We could actually see Hampton growing before our eyes. During this year we noted a change in the R. O. T. C. staff; Colonel Moses relieved Colonel Grinder. The present "meal book" system was instigated upsetting the old "purchase as you go" plan.

During our Junior year we witnessed the inauguration of our new President. The plans were accepted for a new men's dormitory. It is to be constructed where formerly stood historical old Huntington Hall. Another ancient edifice was missed when Winona Lodge was razed.

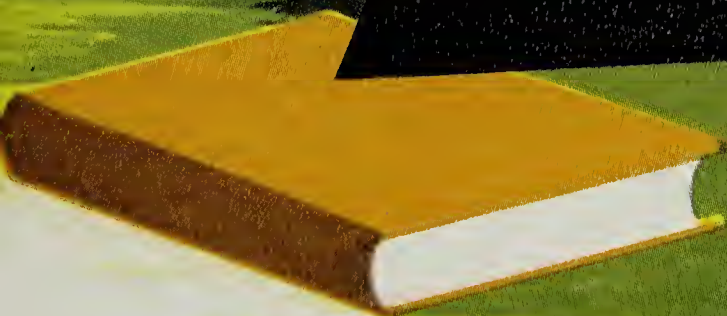

How lovely the night of our Junior-Senior prom. How well remembered; so long remembered.

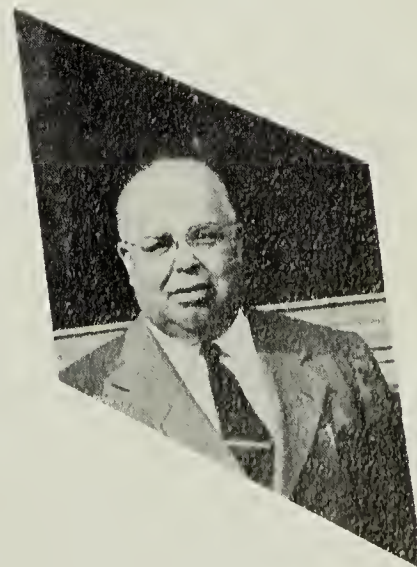

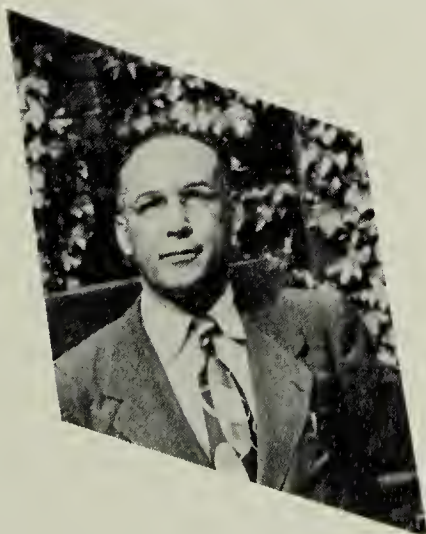

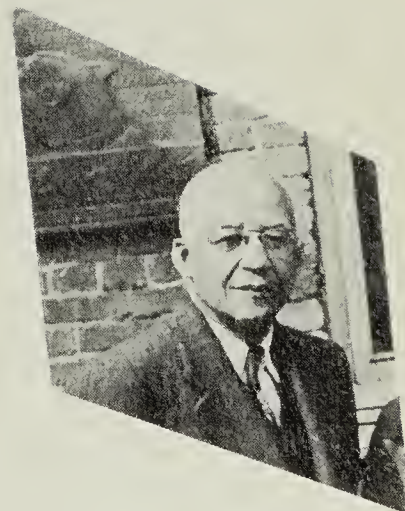

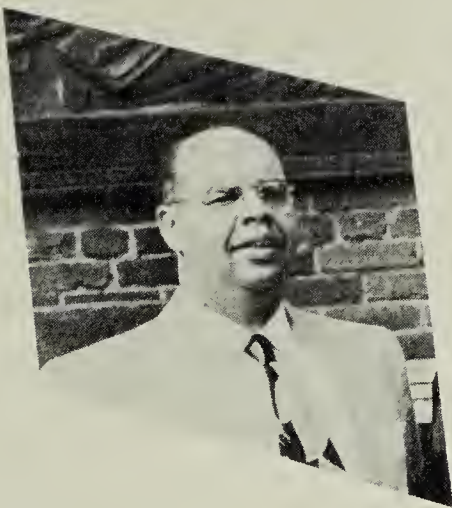

Finally we have reached the top — Seniors! We remember, during this year, the magnificent performances of Charles Laughton, Adele Addison, the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, etc. Ours was the first graduating class to witness the new educational program in action. We watched the rise of the Personnel Council, the Curriculum Committee, the one-year veterans R. O. T. C. program.

As we look back over the years, we think of the happiness the Hampton has provided — a home away from home. We congratulate and pay tribute to those of us who reached the peak in academic standing. Our commendation also to those who excelled in extracurricular activities. Such is the versatility of this class. We feel that Hampton has prepared us to meet our obligations as citizens in our dynamic society. Wherever we go, we shall always cherish and hold dear our thoughts of days at Hampton.

ACTIVITIES

Activities Introduction

The greatest enterprise in the world for splendor and extent, is the "upbuilding of man." One method, certainly, of attaining the goal of Hampton has been the exposure of the student to a culture so high, so far reaching, and so varied that he cannot help conforming to those broad principles of idealism that typify this country and this college as being sanctuaries for esthetic expression and development.

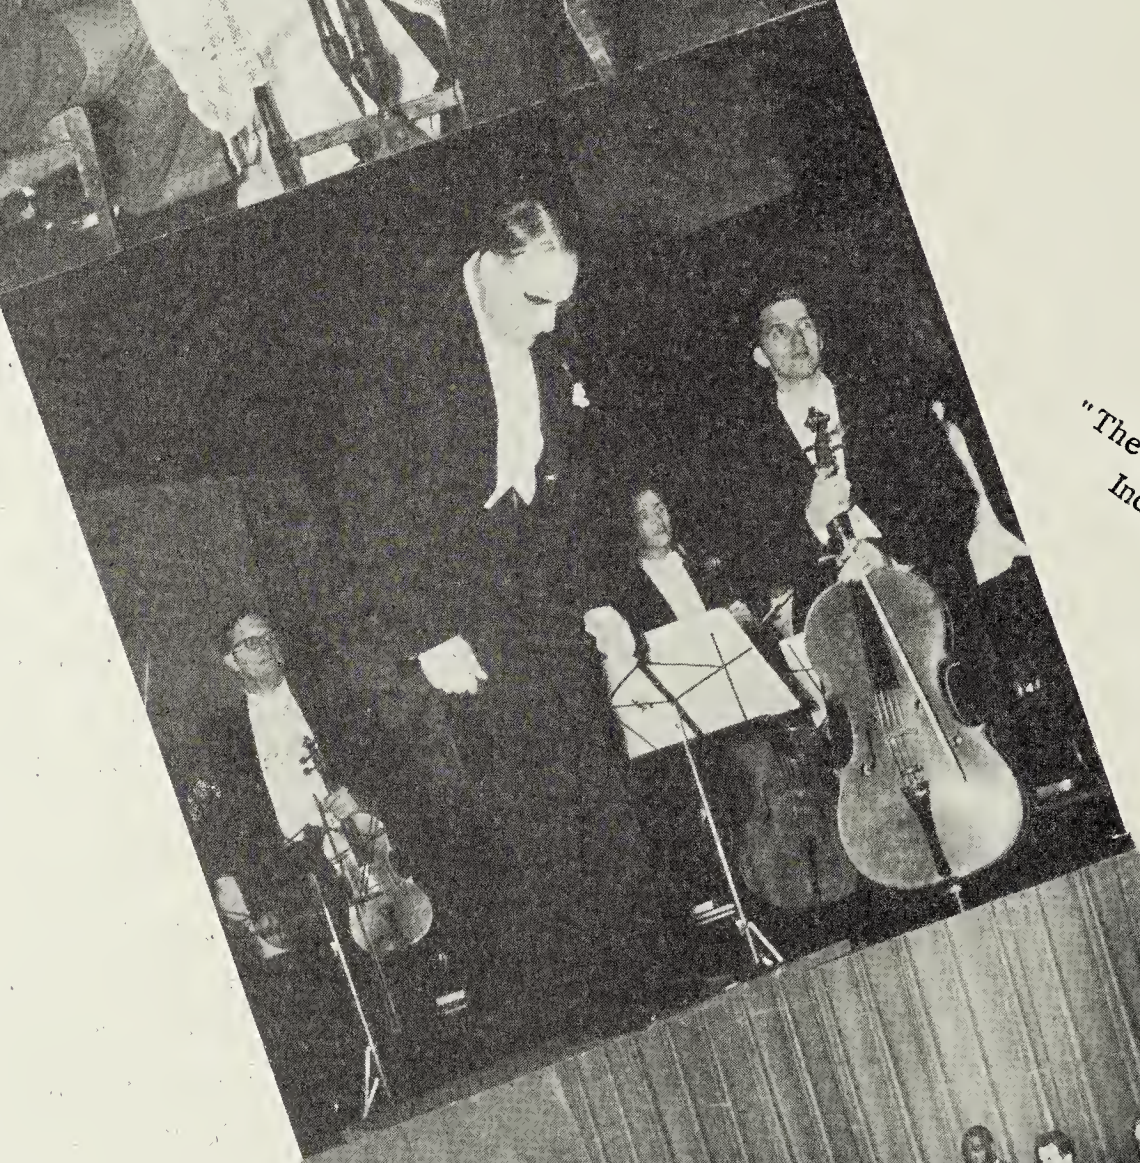

Although the centers for fine arts are far distant from our ivy-clad walls and although the itineraries for the great artists are usually far from our campus, through the auspices of the Musical Arts Society and related committees, each member of the Hampton family, plus members of outlying communities, can enjoy a theatrical season and a concert season that proportionately approaches that of New York. The Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, Charles Laughton, the Touring Players of New York . . . these are the types of cultural elements which have in the past school year colored our environment with the necessary paint to give rise to our versatility and increased comprehension of the abstract.

On the other hand, we are not one-sided "high brows" who are prone to partake in those activities which are unnatural and restrictive in nature. We are young men and women who like our dungarees and slacks and our bull sessions along with our academic seminars. We like to pat our feet to the progressive jazz emanating from a juke box in the grill as well as applaud a preeminent virtuoso in Ogden Hall. We are cognizant of the limits in freedom of expression.

Ye who have faith in youth's great potential and ye who believe in a brighter future for all through the all around improvement of individuals, gaze upon the pictures following and see the Hampton students in action — an integral part of tomorrow's hope.

ORGANIZATIONS

Introduction to Organizations

In an organization such as ours there is a necessity for an element which offers diversions from classroom monotony, which is still in the vein of enlightenment and which serves as an impetus to well-rounded while instilling, cultivating, or encouraging the desirable qualities of leadership and cooperation. The organizations on our campus have perennially served as that element.

Our organizations are many and varied serving the needs of a campus body of the same composition. They fall roughly under the categories of social, religious, civic, and educational. Since the following pages will be dedicated to these organizations we will not give way here to individual enumeration.

In an antagonistic world such as ours where the needs for leadership, understanding, and brotherhood are apparent we hope to carry these feelings to which we have, on a smaller scale, in our organizations been exposed, with us to make "peace in our times" a reality instead of an ideal. On the following pages you will see the organizations, their officers, and their aims. Their history is, in part, the history of the progress of constructive extra-curricular activity at Hampton.

Student Council

The aim of the Student Council is to represent the students in securing better student-faculty relations and to constantly strive to improve the standards of Hampton both morally and academically.

The Hampton Radio Guild was founded in 1947 by Mr. Isaac Ridley and students in electricity and radio workshop classes. It gives students an opportunity to learn and practice standard broadcasting procedures through the medium of station WHOV—Hampton's Own Voice. Station WHOV is a member station of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System and is the only practicing station in the Negro College circuit. WHOV operates on 550 kilocycles weekly and is completely student operated and controlled.

DORMITORY COUNSELLORS

The primary function of the dormitory counsellors is to council the men in the dormitories, to foster mature dormitory living and to create within the male students a loyalty and appreciation for their immediate community.

MEN OF HAMPTON

The Men of Hampton is an organization composed of men from all divisions of the school, who sing because they like to sing. One does not have to know how to read music to become a member, for the singing is done by association. This is one of the principal reasons why the organization has been so popular during the years of its existence.

The Pershing Rifle Honorary Society is still in its embryonic stage, having just received its charter December 14, 1950. The society had its beginning in 1948 with the former PMS&T, Colonel Grinder, initiating the formation from the basic classes in ROTC. Since that time they have creditably represented Hampton in drill meets, exhibitions and parades. Many of the most proficient command barkers and command executionists enrolled in ROTC have been incorporated into the ranks of the Pershing Rifles.

Trade School Coordinators

With the aim "to aid in the administration of the trade and technical program of the Trade School," the Trade School Coordinators came into being in February, 1941.

Each coordinator is elected from his respective area and serves as an intermediary and consultant for the mutual understanding of administration-faculty-student in matters affecting the Division of Technology.

Cognizant of the importance of vocational education, each coordinator gains important experience in the conference contacts which may later stand him in good stead in his industrial life.

Acknowledgments

The completion of a project of this nature is seldom possible without the aid of persons not directly related to the staff. There are always necessary contributions by indirectly concerned persons and organizations. In view of these facts the staff of the HAMPTONIAN '51 extends thanks for the kind attention of the Business Office, the Public Relations Department, Cheyne's Studio, Yearbook House and to all other students and staff members who gave a helping hand. May the successful completion of this annual serve to reward you in excess of our thanks.

To the editor and staff of next year's HAMPTONIAN . . . luck to you.
Let this book serve to guide you, to inspire you, to challenge you.
